and information on current topics in signal processing. All of these resources, and much more, can be contacted over the internet. Start by exploring the manufacturers' websites, and then sending them e-mail requesting specific information.